Position Description

Northfield Mount Hermon School is an independent, coeducational boarding school in western Massachusetts. NMH Summer Session provides quality educational programs that attract students and faculty from all over the United States and the world. We offer a variety of credit and enrichment courses that enable young people to explore ideas and talents they might not have time for during the school year.

NMH Summer Session averages 250 students in grades 7-12 from more than 24 US states and 37 countries. One particular characteristic of our Summer Session student population is its diversity, and we are especially interested in hiring an equally diverse group of teaching interns. Each summer, we hire experienced teachers (master teachers) and teaching interns to help us deliver the outstanding variety of courses and activities that set NMH Summer Session apart from other summer academic programs. Teaching interns assist an experienced teacher with classroom teaching of morning major courses, live in and help run dorms, and take charge of afternoon minor courses and sports. Internships are available in many subject areas.

Additional information, course offerings, and intern application forms are available on the website at www.nmhschool.org/summer.

Qualifications Required

Applications are invited from undergraduates who, as a minimum, will have completed their junior year by the upcoming summer, and from graduate students and recent college graduates. An applicant must have a strong academic record and the maturity and work ethic to succeed in a rigorous and demanding position. They must also demonstrate a strong desire to teach grades 7-12, including any relevant teaching and coaching experience.
