

ANDREW LACK

Biography

Andrew Lack serves as Chairman of NBC News and MSNBC. He oversees editorial and business operations for the award-winning television and digital news properties at both networks. He is a member of the NBCU Executive Committee and reports to Steve Burke, CEO of NBCUniversal.

Lack, an NBC veteran, returned to the company in April 2015. He first joined in 1993 as President of NBC News. Under his leadership, the network transformed into America's most-watched news organization, with "NBC Nightly News," "Meet the Press," "TODAY" and "Dateline NBC" all leading their respective categories. He was also responsible for expanding the "TODAY" show to three hours, and for creating the program's street-side studio at Rockefeller Center in New York City in 1994.

In 2001, Lack was promoted to President and Chief Operating Officer of NBC. In that role, he oversaw entertainment, news (including MSNBC and CNBC), NBC stations, sales, and broadcast and network operations.

Most recently, Lack held the position of the first-ever Chief Executive Officer of the Broadcasting Board of Governors, the independent federal agency that oversees all U.S. civilian international media.

Lack previously served as Chairman of the Bloomberg Media Group. He joined Bloomberg in October 2008 as CEO of its Global Media Group, where he led the expansion of its television, radio, magazine, conference and digital businesses. During Lack's tenure, Bloomberg LP enhanced the quality of its media portfolio, expanded internationally, and built out services to connect people with information in more places, and across more platforms than ever before.

Prior to Bloomberg, Lack was Chairman and CEO of Sony Music Entertainment, where he oversaw management of the company's prominent international artists and vast catalog of recorded music from around the world.

Lack spent much of his early television career at CBS News. After joining in 1976, within a year, he became a prominent producer for "60 Minutes" and subsequently, senior executive producer of "CBS Reports." Lack's broadcasts at CBS earned numerous honors, including 16 Emmy Awards and four Alfred I. DuPont-Columbia University Journalism Awards.

Lack received a bachelor's degree from the College of Fine Arts at Boston University, where he is currently a trustee.

He lives in Bronxville, New York, with his wife, Betsy, and has two sons and a daughter.
